

The Gap is Now Closed and the Trail is now Open!

After a lot of digging, chopping, cutting, and raking by many, many industrious volunteers, youth corps workers and stalwart Coconino National Forest construction crews, the 36 mile long Arizona Trail San Francisco Peaks passage is now complete. Arguably one of the prettiest sections of the Arizona Trail, it winds its way through aspen groves, pine thickets and open fields. Proximity to Mt. Humphreys and a unique ecosystem make the trek here very special. It is now ready for your enjoyment. Working closely with Brian Poturalski and Sean Murphy and other Coconino National Forest staff, Gay and Gary Hohner coordinated a three-year "Close the Gap" volunteer recruiting and trail building effort primarily with a series of two- and three-day work events during the summer months. Each work event was led by AZT stewards with hundreds of trail workers from the Flagstaff area and across the state.

Las Colinas and Las Cienegas Passages Now Complete!

"We didn't build just a trail. Along the way we forged a community."

--Mark Flint

Pima County Recreation Planner Steve Anderson's 1990's plan to link the Arizona Trail from Saguaro National Park 40 miles south to the Coronado National Forest is now a reality. The Cienega Corridor project started as a volunteer effort to build a 25-mile segment of the Arizona Trail beginning at Saguaro National Park in the Rincon Mountains and working south to the Santa Rita Mountains. A second project, the Las Colinas segment, began in 2008 to extend the trail another twelve miles into the Santa Rita foothills, tying it in with the Arizona Trail where it ended at Oak Tree Canyon. This is another example of southern Arizona community volunteerism.

AZT into Saguaro National Park – Check This One Off, Too!

As is the Arizona Trail way, many forces came together to complete this 4.5 mile section of trail in early 2011. With support from Congresswoman Giffords, Park staff led many groups in building this trail in barely a year's time. Once again, we have another outstanding example of agency folks and volunteers working together on the Arizona Trail.

EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR'S REPORT

"Trail work is never done."

by Dave Hicks

The front cover of this newsletter proudly recognizes the completion of some long sought sections of the Arizona Trail. Those sections took tremendous effort from the initial idea to the last foot of trail being built. And I assure you that those successes didn't happen overnight. Happily, we are nearing the finish line for a continuous path across the beautiful state of Arizona. Hopefully the last section of the AZT will be built by the end of 2011. When that happens, AZT visionary Dale Shewalter will be smiling down on it.

Recently, I have heard a few comments of "what will we do next?" Well, I know it's gratifying to build new trail. And the wide-spread enthusiasm shown over the last 25 years is heart-warming. And I have to admit that there is tremendous pride in possibly being only the third complete National Scenic Trail. BUT, work on the Arizona Trail has only started.

The AZT is forever and there is much to be done today and I guarantee you that in the future there always will be needed trail work and improvements. The AZT has lots of room to improve from better tread to better signage with a goal to make the trail more user friendly. In addition, there are many potential reroutes that will make the trail experience better. Plus, unavoidable natural inflictions from fire, wind and water will continue to cause devastating damage. And unfortunately, human actions will continue to make the trail susceptible to both minor repairs and very significant change.

Thus, "trail work is never done". So as in the past 25 years, the ATA along with its many agency, club and business partners will rely on its unequalled volunteers to meet the challenges that come with being a long distance trail, a state "Treasure", and a National Scenic Trail. I am confident all of those challenges will be met and the Arizona Trail will become a better and better long distance trail.

Arizona Trail Guide Book: PDF Version Coming Soon

As the last few printed copies of the Arizona Trail Official Guide book were shipped out of the ATA office, work had begun on revising, updating and improving the Arizona Trail bible. Simplified and streamlined, the new version will be one more ATA member benefit that is available for downloading from the ATA website as a PDF. Look for it in the next couple of months. And, don't worry in the near future a hard copy will be available for purchase too.

Arizona Trail Gateway Community Shop Opens in Patagonia

Arizona Trail users in Patagonia have a new resource for equipping their adventures. Mariposa Books and More now offers supplies and trail necessities including Arizona Trail t-shirts and bandanas. Already known as Patagonia's visitor information center, Mariposa Books and More features maps and local interest books. Owner Ann Caston is truly a wealth of information on the area and is a great supporter of the Arizona Trail. Visit Ann at 317 S. McKeown Avenue, (520) 394-9186.
