More than 100 Runners Attempt Stagecoach Ultra

According to endurance runner Ian Torrence, trail running has become increasingly popular as athletes head to the woods to cover ground instead of city streets. This weekend, Sept. 24 and 25, more than 125 people are signed up to run the Flagstaff to Grand Canyon Stagecoach Line 100-mile solo ultra, the 100-mile relay, and the 55K.

Babbitt Ranches understands this craving for high country pine forests and vast rolling grasslands. In fact, it is the site of three endurance races in northern Arizona: the SP Crater Marathon on the CO Bar Ranch in the spring; Gaspin' in the Aspen, which starts and ends at Arizona Nordic Village in the summer; and, 20 miles of the Stagecoach Ultra, which crosses the CO Bar north of the San Francisco Peaks.

"We encourage people to come out and appreciate the land through different recreational activities, says Babbitt Ranches President and General Manager Bill Cordasco. "As more of us participate with nature and the outdoors, it's only natural to want to care about the land and develop what we call an Outdoor Recreation Ethics Attitude."

Torrence says runners in the Stagecoach Ultra share the trail with cattle, horses, deer and antelope and at times can hear the distant bugling of elk. "By the time they reach the Moqui Stage Aid Station (near mile 60), the sun has set, but the moon has taken over making even colors visible without the use of headlamps. After running across the wide-open spaces of Babbitt Ranches, it is here at the southern boundary of the Kaibab National Forest that competitors return to the trees and the single-track Arizona Trail for the remainder of their 100-mile journey."

Babbitt Ranches, one of the race's sponsors, will again be hosting the Cedar Ranch Camp, Tubbs Camp and Oil Line Aid Stations.

Landscape Discovery Expo Celebrates 130 Years of Exploration

Interactive science event features moon rover, prehistoric civilizations, live raptors and a giant reptile at Arizona Nordic Village

Space exploration, rare plants and animals, ancient pueblos and even a Triassic period meat-eater known as Arizonasaurus babbitti will be featured at the Babbitt Ranches and Landsward Foundation Landscape Discovery Expo from 9:30 a.m. – 3 p.m., Saturday, Oct. 1, at Arizona Nordic Village on Highway 180.

The free event marks 130 years of exploration across the Coconino Plateau and celebrates the many relationships involving Babbitt Ranches and scientific organizations. Along with drone technology and live raptors, including a golden eagle, the Expo will showcase wide and varied research including the search for plants with resilient genes and an effective plague vaccine to protect prairie dogs.

The Expo is part of the Flagstaff Festival of Science, Sept. 23 – Oct. 2. For more information, visit www.scifest.org
